The day started out bright and the ignition of the Atco Gas Torch in Didsbury Sunday morning brightened the sky even further.

"Ignite the competition and enthusiasm and keep it burning for three days," said Atco representative, Daryl Kong.

Mary Turner, co-chair of the Olds/Didsbury Games committee said, "Carry the torch with pride because we are so thrilled to have the spirit of the games in our communities."

More than 70 runners from Zone 2, of all ages, and abilities lined the path of the relay run which took the torch between Didsbury and Olds. A special stop was made at the Didsbury Auxiliary Hospital, where Bill Gibbs, 102, and recent recipient of the Legion of Honor medal for service in WWI, carried the torch as an honorary bearer.

The flame made its path down 2A and into the opening ceremonies at the Olds grandstand for the official opening of the 1999 Alberta Seniors Games.

An afternoon downpour left two rainbows in the skies above the Alberta Seniors Games opening ceremonies and there was also a rainbow in the stands as the parade of colors representing each zone filed into their seats.

About 1200 participants from eight different zones throughout the province gathered in the stands, together with thousands of spectators. So many spectators, in fact, that there was little room in the stands for spectators to take cover from the rain.

But, when the rain stopped, the spirit ignited.

While waiting for the ceremonies to begin, people began to stomp their feet, clap their hands, and sing an old time favorite, "It's a long way to Tipperary."

The warmth of the song, "Light a Candle," performed by entertainers, Chuck Howard, Don Bill Gibbs, 102, was an honorary torch bearer along the route past the Didsbury Hospital.

Matchullis and Doug Duff, seemed to bring a warmth to the weather, as they sang and the sun began to shine. The words of the song were meant to inspire the athletes and all those involved in bringing together the huge task of putting on the Games. "The hour that seems the darkest turns quickly into day. Light a candle and let it show us the way... Light a candle for the hope that we share... Light a candle for the love that we share," the words rang out.

The warmth of the song, the air, and the camaraderie were equalled only by the warm welcome given to the participants by the greetings.

Mayor of Didsbury, Ray Lea called out, "You're a welcome sight and you'll put on a helluva show, I know you will," said Lea.

Lea also spoke about the volunteers who have worked three long years to bring the dream into the reality of the day. "I know they'll make you feel at home and show you some good southern hospitality. Come back and see us again."

Mayor Norma Duncan said, "We hope you'll all get to know our communities even just a little bit." She also talked of the years of planning that went into the Olds/Didsbury event.

"It's hard to believe this moment has finally arrived after so much anticipation," she said.

Greetings were also brought on behalf of the Alberta Senior Citizens Sport and Recreation Association by their president Grace Champion. "You're all winners" she said.

The Honourable Stan Woloshyn, Minister of Community Development asked each senior to take something away with them, a medal or just a friendship. "I know you're going to give these towns something to remember and I know you'll all take home cherished memories," said Woloshyn.

A unique touch to the ceremony was the performance of an original composition of music written by Didsburian, Joel Windsor. "With the Spirit of Youth," was a three part piece performed by the Royal Canadian Band from Edmonton was meant to capture the spirit of excitement and theme of friendship that encompassed the whole atmosphere of the opening ceremonies.

The participants took an oath that read, "In the name of all competitors, I pledge that we will take part in these Games in the true spirit of sportsmanship, respecting and abiding by the rules that govern them, for the glory of sport and the honor of our team," which the group chanted along with local athlete, Annie Pringle.

Pringle may have summed it up the best with two simple words.

"Good Games!" she called out.

Town of Olds corporate report released

CAO and Mayor are identified as key players in the problems in Olds

By Ceilidh McClurg

The completion of a corporate review is hoped to bring closure of months of in-fighting at the Olds Town Office.

Divisive splits on council, and among the staff resulted in Municipal Affairs being called in early this year. The department appointed an inspector who provided recommendations that had to be followed through by the end of August, one of which was the hiring of a consultant to do a corporate review.

George Cuff and Associates came in and began to clean house at the end of May, and released their final report to the public on Thursday.

"I don't think the situation I came into is the same today," said Cuff in his opening remarks.

He noted that during his discussion with council, he offered them all the opportunity to resign collectively or as individuals, but the council felt that together with the report in hand and the right spirit, they would achieve harmony within the town office walls for the first time since shortly after the election last October.

He released three reports, a final report that won't be available to the public until it has been reviewed by legal counsel, a personnel report that outlines the changes and removals that will take place within the town staff which will not be released, and a 42 page executive summary released to the public last week.

The reports include 52 recommendations ranging from how to better run the cardboard recycling program, to many recommendations aimed at the communication between staff, the council, and the administration and a complete overhaul of the organizational structure.

Cuff stated that the public will see action almost immediately on some of the recommendations, while the personnel changes will take place over the next couple of months.

Parts of the executive summary were critical of certain individuals within the town of fice administration, particularly the incumbent Chief Administrative Officer.

Cuff, who would not say if the incumbent CAO would be facing the loss of his position, did state in his report, "Our interviews reveal that the department heads, as a group, are not prepared to throw their unqualified support behind the CAO as they believe that this situation is past the point where an amicable resolution can be found that will be sustainable."

Cuff interviewed each member of the staff, the council, and some members of the public in Olds to draw the conclusions included in the report.

One significant problem found on every level was communication, both with the public and among staff.

"Communication has not been a strong point of this organization, to put it mildly," Cuff told the crowd of about 100 that had gathered to hear the results.

In the executive summary he details, "Communication systems are unable to support the needs of the organization and are inadequate. Internal communications are almost totally ineffective with most non-management staff telling us that they rely on the grapevine or the local media for information about the organization." Cuff specifically addressed the attitude of much of the upper management of the Town of Olds that the inquiries by the public were a nuisance, and did not need to be addressed in any sort of manner. At the report release, Cuff stated that this is a pitfall for an organization that is designed as a public body.

"The public is the business," he said.

He noted that the lack of communication caused a great deal of the problems, because there was no level of trust between the staff, the council and the public.

Other problems that Cuff addressed among personnel was the lack of experience of some members of council, including Mayor Norma Duncan.

Specifically the report states, "The majority of council feels strongly that the Mayor's leadership style needs to change if the council is to act in a more effective and collegial fashion. The majority, if not all of council, also recognizes that they must accept the decision of the ratepayers as to who has been elected Mayor and work cooperatively with the incumbent to properly serve the collective interests of the residents of Olds."

While Cuff went through some of the issues involving the role and the actions of the Mayor, Duncan, who sat in the front row during the report release sometimes blushed, but seemed in high spirits. She had already seen the report earlier that afternoon.

The report also addressed the lack of planning for the replacement of integral equipment, such as firefighting equipment, that has now become a safety issue, and major infrastructure such as the lack of ability for the water treatment plant to accommodate the residents.

After the public examination of the corporate review Duncan was obviously relieved that the process was complete, and said she was ready to start working on recommendations dealing both directly with her personal performance, as well as working with the office staff to be sure all of the recommendations were implemented where they needed to be.

When commenting on the last seven months of turmoil Duncan said, "They've been very, very difficult. I am just really looking forward to getting on with things and getting the recommendations implemented because they are all very positive."

Cuff asked the public to recognize that their local government had gone through a tough time, but to allow them the chance to recover and continue on with the business of running Olds.

"We've hit a banana peel in life and we've all made the choice to move forward and we need to offer them (the Town Office and council) the same opportunity," said Cuff.

Closing Ceremonies

A bittersweet end to three days

The Closing Ceremonies are designed to add the finishing touches to your experience at the 1999 Alberta Seniors Games. The event begins at 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday, July 28 in the Didsbury Memorial Complex with Pre-ceremonies entertainment provided by a combined communities seniors choir. All participants will parade into the Arena from the west end of the arena to greet spectators and special guests alike. This procedure is a slight departure from the practice at other Games. The Organizing Committees felt that the special situation of two communities hosting the Games made for special circumstances, and Didsbury spectators will also enjoy a Participant Parade. To symbolize the friendships made in the past three days, participants will not parade in Zones, but will mingle with others from across the province.

Alberta's Premier, the Honourable Ralph Klein, will be our special guest. Well-known personalities, Ed and Nomi Whalen, will be the emcees for this event. Ed has been involved in TV broadcasting for 50 years in southern Alberta, most specifically in the sports arena. Nomi was a Calgary Alderman and a dedicated volunteer in the community.

Andrea McCulloch, a native Didsburian and accomplished operatic singer, will sing the national anthem. The combined seniors choir will be under the direction of Fred Bogner of Didsbury. This unique group is composed of dedicated singers from the Didsbury 5-0 Club, the Olds Evergreens, and members of local churches in the area. A "Tribute to the Volunteers" will be given by Olds/Didsbury Co-Chairs, Mary Turner and Bill Cowan. Various awards will be presented, including the Ebba Bakgaard Award, Alberta Seniors Zone Championship Trophy, and Most Improved Zone Trophy. The flag will be passed to the 2001 host community, the City of Lethbridge.

Finally, and reluctantly, the Games torch will be extinguished by Premier Ralph Klein. The Keynotes will bid you "Happy Trails" as 1,000 candles are extinguished. Our guests will recognize this event as a fitting conclusion to their stay in Olds and Didsbury, and volunteers and local spectators will once again express their pride at hosting another successful provincial event. The participants will depart for home, with fond memories of the reception provided by the communities of Olds and Didsbury.

The Royal Canadian Artillery Band performed an original piece of music written by local, Joel Windsor, especially for the 1999 Alberta Seniors Games, entitled "With the Spirit of Youth."

Mayor of Didsbury, Ray Lea and Mayor of Olds, Norma Duncan were honorary torch bearers as they took the first steps onto the relay trail on Sunday morning.

The Divine Dance Academy performed two special numbers for the thousands in the crowd.

Ed Bauer of Olds lit the cauldron at the opening ceremonies.

Dirty Mothers will have a ball at National competition

By Ceilidh McClurg

The Didsbury Dirty Mothers will head to the national competition again this year.

The local team of 15 ladies, have become somewhat of local heroes. Last year they were undefeated for most of the season, and went on to win the provincial championships.

Winning that spot last year is what has taken them to Nationals in Niagara Falls. The top four teams in each province are invited to play in the huge tournament, and the Mothers decided that they would go.

They are building on experience from last year's trip to the Nationals in Prince Edward Island, where they made it into the finals competition, but lost out in two very close games.

"We're definitely looking forward to another kick at it," says Rhonda Hunter, team coach and player.

The team left Tuesday night after stopping in Calgary to compete in the B Division Final for their league.

"We're hoping to leave with the B Final championship when we go," said Hunter Thursday.

Their plane heads out at midnight and they will arrive early Wednesday morning in Toronto.

The ladies will catch a Blue Jays game, and maybe pick up a few major league pointers, before heading to Niagara Falls on Thursday.

Then the actual action begins. The Dirty Mothers are scheduled to play three games on Friday and one on Saturday in round robin competition with the other teams in their division, Ontario, Newfoundland and Nova Scotia. If all goes well, and the Dirty Mothers live up to their history, they will head to the final games on Sunday.

"We're going to take it one game at a time," says Hunter.

With 18 teams making a showing at the Nationals, the Mothers strong slo-pitch past will be a benefit to them all around. And, their regular season win-loss record of 16-8 won't hurt either.

A total of 15 Dirty Mothers have packed their bags for the trip.

Although two are still suffering from injuries taken earlier in the regular season, Hunter isn't worried that the team can pull it all together. "We're pretty comfortable and confident we'll make a good showing," she says.

This is not an inexpensive venture for the ladies. Hunter says that through their ball tournament and their steak and lobster night, and a few private donations, the team managed to raise about $7000 towards the cost of the Nationals trip. Together with the $8000 the ladies themselves pulled together, it is a lot of money.

But it's all worth it, says Hunter. The team will enjoy the travelling, the sightseeing, the camaraderie, and of course the ball.

"It's so much fun to compete at that level," she says.

The team will return to Didsbury on Aug. 5, and Hunter says she has high hopes that they will return with good news and maybe a little medal around their neck.

OPINIONS EDITORIAL

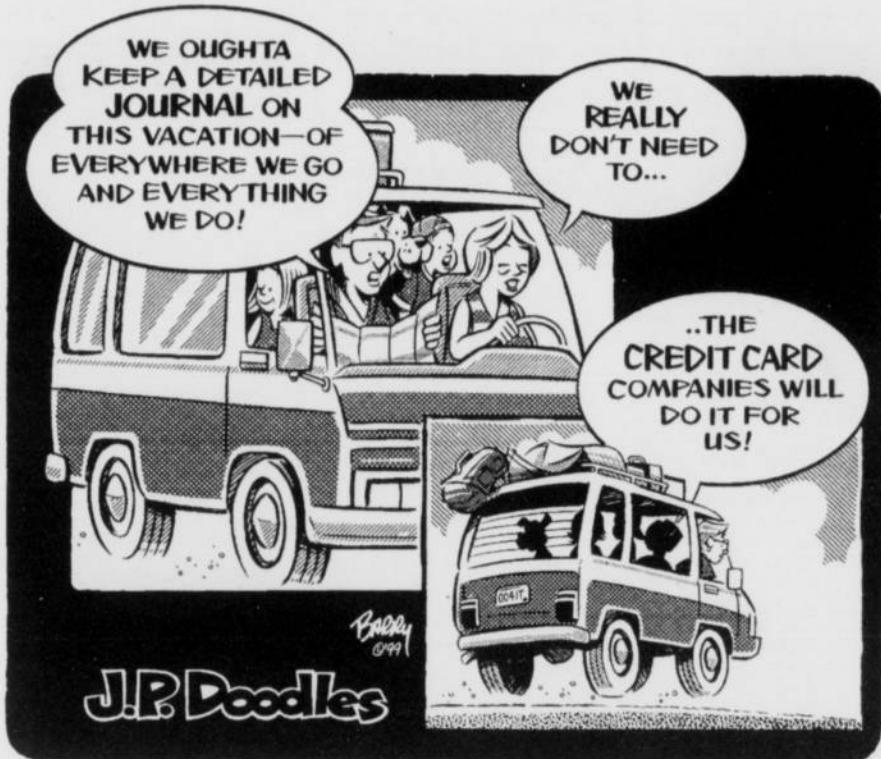

By Ceilidh McClurg

It is a little hard to imagine that a council can make a decision that could profit their bottom line by about a half a million dollars, without being biased. But, this is the situation put in front of the Mountain View County council over the past couple of months regarding a mega resort development, that involves the sale of a quarter section of their own land, a sale which is contingent upon the approval of the development by their council.

I don't envy those people around the table. It seems no matter what decision they make, they will be accused of a bias by the public, and admittedly probably by myself. But, they have an interesting tactic of being sure that the decision is made without the public, who has expressed vehement opposition, is not lording over them. It is a tactic often used by the justice system; delay, delay, delay.

They are not to be blamed for taking their time, because it is a huge decision that shouldn't be rushed, but sitting in the council one gets the impression that they have every intention of allowing the redesignation to go through no matter what is said, so why not just do it? Why delay the inevitable?

My theory is that they are simply waiting until the August meeting, which has strict restriction on what can be discussed, and hoping that the huge amounts of people present at the hearings regarding the issue over the last couple of months, will not be in the gallery to watch how it unfolds. I would encourage any member of the public who is concerned about this decision, the conflict of interest, and the biased of the county, to still attend the hearing even though they will not be permitted to speak. Our public representatives need to be continually reminded that we are still watching, it our job, and their responsibility to act appropriately.

FROM THE MAILBAG

Most are happy campers, managers say

Dear Editor,

I have avoided replying to comments made by people who, in my opinion, have no respect for others or their surroundings.

At this time, I feel I am compelled to reply to an article in the Didsbury Review, dated Wed. July 21, 1999, "Not a happy camper," by Bruce Hamblin of Olds.

The weekend in question is July 9 and 10. Because of the many days of rain, the campground was unusually wet, with water pooling in many grass areas. We, the management, asked a 12-year-old boy if he would ride his bike in dryer areas, or on the campground roadways. His reply was, "So what are you going to do about it? My father is an RCMP officer." We did call out several times for the children to bike in the dryer area. The 12-year-old boy paid no attention, he continued to find the deepest water holes to do his wheelies, and of course, the other children followed. The 12-year-old boy would then pass very close to our window to see if we were watching. We didn't take this complaint to the parents as we were trying to avoid conflict.

On the following Monday morning, while fuelling our car in Didsbury, a gas attendant made this comment, "I had a customer of yours from the campground that said I have a mind to turn management into the Didsbury Town Office for not having or trying to control unruly children in the campground on the weekend."

Looks to me like a no win situation.

In reference to the children as quoted in the article, "your shoes are too dirty to use the washroom." The children in question were barefoot. Due to the excessive amount of rain, the area under and around the playground swings were full of mud and water. We continued to clean mud from the showers and floor, while wondering where such a mess could be coming from. After some time we found that three children from Sites 14 and 15 (sites of slow pitch campers) were making a game of getting as muddy as they could and then running to the showers to clean off. We did tell them to stay out of the washroom, it is not a play area.

One of the fathers came to our door to ask how come the children could not go to the washrooms to wash their feet. I explained what was happening and he seemed to understand. Sometimes we do have to ask children not to make the bathrooms a play area as we have a number of weekly and weekend campers going to the washrooms and showers that expect it to be clean.

In addressing the car with two wheels on the grass. Yes, he was asked to park in Lot 15 or on the side of the road. His reply was "I am an RCMP officer. I have my car parked here in case of emergency." We did not think our request would affect his emergency call, as he was wearing a cell phone on his belt.

In trying to keep the grass green and free of deep ruts, we have found that when there are groups of people, first there are two wheels on the grass, the next person has four wheels on the grass and then everyone else coming to the park thinks it's okay to park anywhere they wish.

Besides this group of slow pitch players, we had two other groups who were happy campers and they let us know. Maybe this has something to do with attitude.

We try very hard to have no conflict with our customers, and in large, most of our campers are happy. That is why 90% of our campers return again and again.

Sincerely,
Rosemary and Gordon Hancock

Managers of the Rosebud Valley Campground, Didsbury.

Wonderings of the heart

Remember when?

By Margaret Fradley

This spring, when the time came to seed, plant and put out our bedding out plants, I suddenly remembered having put away some special packages of seeds for the following year. I had put them away carefully, but now when I needed them I could not find them. I looked high and low, but to no avail, so I set out to purchase other seeds and bedding out plants.

It has happened before that I store things away in a secure place, but when the need arises, I can't remember where I put them. (I truly hope I am not alone in this). Even a thorough search doesn't cause them to show up.

After finally getting my seeds in and my flowerbeds the way I wanted them, I suddenly recalled where I had put those packages of seeds. Yes, there they were. I had found them - but would you believe among them were several packages of Forget Me Nots! Enough said.

Notes from Nigeria: It is good to be home

Dan and Janet Snyder are Didsburians who are missionaries in Nigeria. They are working at a school in Jos, Nigeria for the Evangelical Missionary Church of Canada, and Dan is teaching math and English, while Janet runs the library for the whole school.

Dear Family and Friends,

It's good to be back in Nigeria! I am very grateful that I was able to have the surgery in England and that I healed quickly. It was great to renew my friendship with Dr. Habib and his family in England. The time in Canada was also very enjoyable. There was the family reunion on Fathers' Day with over sixty of the Snyder family there. Then there was the High School graduation reunion.

It's hard to believe that it's been thirty years since we graduated from Didsbury High School, but it was so good to see many classmates that I hadn't seen for a very long time.

At the class reunion, the grads were asked to introduce themselves and their spouses, and tell a bit about what they had been doing for the last thirty years. One thing about that impressed me was the number of classmates who had been married for over 25 years. In this day and age when divorce affects over half of the families in our nation, it was wonderful to hear about families that stayed together. We were also asked to tell the most important thing that we had learned since graduation. Of course, there was one person who was still waiting to learn something, but I was again impressed by the number of people who mentioned family values, "love God and your neighbor," and "family and friends are the most important things in life." I count myself very fortunate to have classmates that hold such values.

International travel isn't always so much fun. I used to love flying, but the novelty has worn off and the reality has set in. Sitting on a plane for seven hours can be boring, despite the snacks, meals, and movies. Waiting for hours (six in Minneapolis) in airports is anything but enjoyable. Fortunately I needed to get to a drug store to buy some allergy medicine for Janet that wasn't available yet in Canada. In Amsterdam I had only two hours to wait, so I shaved, brushed my teeth, and changed clothes.

By the time I arrived in Kano (Nigeria) I had been up over thirty hours with only naps on the planes. I was grateful for answered prayer: things did go smoothly in Kano airport. After 47 days, it was great to see Janet again. We really must plan better next time we're separated to make sure it isn't so long. We stayed with missionary friends in Kano over night, and drove back to Jos the next day. We had a driver so we spent the three and a half hours chatting about all the things that we hadn't communicated by e-mail.

Back in Jos, I'm grateful for the changes that Janet made while I was away. She obviously managed very well. Maraya (our bird) was glad to see me, but she's gone back to biting Janet, which she didn't do at all while I was gone. My internal clock is all confused. I need to take naps in the middle of the day and I wake up at 3 a.m. This morning I went back to sleep about 5:30 and Janet had to wake me up at 11:15 or I might have slept the whole day.

Janet's allergies seem to be a bit better; maybe the medicine helped. We'll see what happens when we go to Miango on Monday. Preparations for Vacation Bible School for about 45 mission kids has occupied most of our time since returning to Jos. Janet had most things ready, but there are always last-minute things that need to be done.

We appreciate feedback about our weekly letters. It's good discipline for us to write them, and they help us focus on what we're doing here.

While I was home I was encouraged by a number of people who said that they enjoyed them. Thanks for letting us share our mundane lives in a different environment with you.

Dan and Janet Snyder

Where does that leave us?

Dear Editor,

The NATO countries have prevailed in Yugoslavia. Even though it was against the charter of NATO and even though it was illegal under the United Nations charter, we have our politicians in Ottawa acting like they did something Canadians wanted. In fact, it was just a few disgusting politicians headed up by that wonderful picture of honesty, Mr. Bill Clinton and that shining example of truth and Liberalism, our own Jean Chretien.

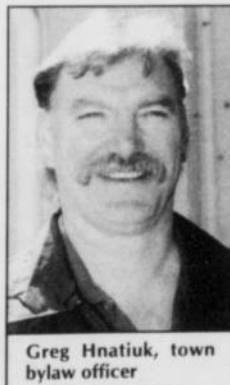

The idea that we bombed Yugoslavia to prevent ethnic cleansing was sheer fiction. The United Nations Commissioner for refugees reported that the first refugees out of Kosovo were on March 27, three days after the bombing started in Yugoslavia. In other words, the bombing started the refugees moving. And let's get something straight, the pictures shown on the establishment TV and the controlled newspaper stories have just about exactly the same amount of truth as a Canadian politician. Zero to none!

What we did was much the same as the Nazis did in March 1941, the last time Belgrade was bombed. We bombed the bridges over the Danube, the roads, the factories, the power plants, the water stations and their automotive works, the Yugo or Skoda factories. We haven't a Canadian-owned car factory in Canada, but we go destroy someone else!

And now we come to the bottom line for the silly Canadian puppets. Yugoslavia will have to be repaired and they will have to borrow money from the International Monetary Fund. Ottawa takes loans from the bankers and gives the money to the IMF. You will pay for ever in interest on those loans. Yugoslavia will be an occupied nation which will pay for ever on the money they borrow from the international parasite fund. You won't be free and they won't be free, but it sure worked out well for the world bankers.

Someone once said, don't put down to malice that which can be assigned to stupidity. Well Canadians aren't malicious, but Americans are. Where does that leave us?

Sincerely,
Dennis Combs,
Olds, AB

Water Valley mega development delayed again

By Ceilidh McClurg

A major Water Valley development has been stalled again after hours of debate from the public gallery.

At the county public hearings last Wednesday, a 2440 acre elite resort development reappeared on the county council table after being tabled last month. The application put forward in June's meeting was to rezone two quarters of land among the thousands of acres from agricultural to direct control designation, to allow for the construction of a resort style community.

Direct control regulations allows the county set individual guidelines for a specific piece of land. But, in June there was handfuls of letters and vocal opposition to the redesignation, and the hearing last week compounded another four hours of letters and verbal opposition to the situation.

The project being considered would include a working ranch, 54 bareland condominiums, 11 townhouses, 36 lodge units, a golf course, a pro-shop, equestrian facilities, and a number of hiking and cross country ski trails.

The land, located two and half miles south and nine miles west of Cremona consists of two deeded quarters, for which the redesignation was being sought, and 13 quarters of a grazing lease.

In fact, that grazing lease was the root of some of the concern. Many of the letters questioned how promotional advertising for the project could list 2440 acres of "private wilderness," when in fact, most of that land is leased public lands. Other were concerned about the use of public land for private gain.

However, when the developers had a chance to speak to the crowd, they indicated that they would be within the confines of the regulations concerning the use of grazing leases. "Neither are we outside of the letter of the grazing lease, or the spirit," said Andrew Lonseth, one of the developers. He pointed out that they would need to very closely be sure they were within the regulations because they need those 13 quarters to have a project. "We'd absolutely be foolish to jeopardize the lease in any way," he said.

Another land issue was raised by many of the letter authors, and that is that Mountain View County owns one quarter of the land that would be sold to the developers pending the development going through. Gallery members questioned how the county could deal with the situation objectively.

"Surely this can't be considered at an arms length from the county," said Robert Kennedy in this letter that was read into the public minutes.

Kennedy also outlined his concern that this project takes up some good agricultural land, and land that has been deemed environmentally significant by the county themselves.

"Once this has been taken out of agricultural uses, it will never be returned back," he said.

Those two issues were also of great concern to many of those who spoke or wrote in opposition to the redesignation.

A letter from Jennifer Kennedy, who is an adjacent landowner and who has hired a lawyer to fight the development, said, "There seems to be no thoughts given to the protection of agricultural land. What are we leaving for our children?" The Kennedys also presented a petition signed by about 100 people.

Lonseth said that he felt there would little loss of agriculture because the working ranch would remain part of the complete project, and would in fact, keep the exact same number of head of animals as it currently has under 7H Ranch.

He added that their company would do everything possible to protect wildlife, because from a purely commercial standpoint, they are using that attraction in their marketing, and if they lost wildlife, they would lose business. Lonseth called the attitude of those in opposition, "a reluctance to share the beauty of Alberta with others."

Almost every one of the 14 letters read in opposition to the development felt that the approval of such a project would be premature because there is not even an Area Structure Plan for the greater Water Valley area.

Annette Scott, who also wrote a letter which was read into the public minutes stated, "I am not opposed to growth... I am opposed to growth developing without any county foresight." An Area Structure Plan would outline the future types of developments, and the areas that would be best suited to them.

Some of the letter writers felt the problem with the application was that it involved too many parts, and was being rushed.

Mike Speer, who admittedly lives quite a distance from the proposed site, but feels many of the concerns are broader than just for the neighbors, said that he worried the application was being rushed through. He encouraged the council to take a much deeper look into many aspects including some voiced opposition and the real impact that the development would have on the community.

"Don't push this," said Norm Hagel from the area.

The county was also encouraged to reject the application by their municipal neighbors, the County of Big Horn, who are adjacent to the property. They unanimously voted to send disapproval forward based on a number of concerns.

But not everyone was against the project. In fact, a letter was sent outlining benefits to the county and the surrounding neighbourhood, which included 54 signatures from the area.

It stated that there were five reasons they believed the project would be a positive addition to the area. First, they said, it would create jobs for local youth, second, they believed the environmental concerns would take care of themselves because of all the environmental assessments and other reports that would have to be done before any construction began. Third, they believed the increase in tax revenue dollars brought in by the development and the sale of the land would help keep taxes down for all ratepayers. Fourth, they believed the increase in population, would increase business for local merchants. Fifth, they said that no one would even be able to see the development. "It can't be seen by any front porch in the county," the letter said.

Also, a letter signed by six Cremona School students was read into the minutes in support of the project.

Because of the additional concerns brought forward, by both residents and other government departments, the county planners recommended to the council that they again delay any decision on the issue until they had more time to review those additional issues.

Coun. Gerald Ingerveld agreed. "This is a very important issue we're facing here," he said.

Coun. Ian Harvie made a motion to postpone any decision until an Aug. 28 meeting. However, he included in his motion that at that time the only additional information being addressed will be department and agency reports, not more public input. The motion was carried unanimously.

Trio fined for bar fight

Three men charged after a fight in an Olds bar involving more than a dozen people last month have been fined.

Steven Timothy Becker, 24, Brian Wayne Rodericks, 50, and Serge Joseph Smith, 31, all pleaded guilty in Didsbury provincial court last Monday to charges of causing a disturbance.

The accused admitted to yelling and shouting at RCMP officers who were attempting to break up the fight.

Alcohol was a factor in the incident, prosecutor Danny Elliott said.

Judge Maloney fined each man $150.

Youth drove drunk

A 17-year-old Olds-area boy, who cannot be identified, pleaded guilty in Didsbury provincial youth court on Monday to a charge of driving with a blood alcohol level greater than 80 mg per cent.

The defendant was stopped outside Olds on June 6, 1999 after police noticed a burned out headlight on his vehicle.

Breathalyzer tests taken later indicated the accused's blood alcohol level was 180 mg per cent.

Judge Maloney fined the boy $300.

South West Didsbury news

A number of Didsbury, Carstairs, Cremona, Calgary, Etzikom and Grande Prairie relatives and friends attended the wedding of Josh Foat of Calgary (son of Melvin and Gwen Foat of Grande Prairie and formerly of the Carstairs/ Cremona area) to Arvis Dewald of Strathmore (daughter of Ken and Linda Dewald of Strathmore). They were married Saturday, July 17 with wedding and reception for 300 guests at the bible college. Conducting the wedding ceremony was Arvis's brother Rev. Evan Dewald. Amongst the guests was grandmother Phylis Foat of Carstairs.

The happy couple honeymooned in Prince Edward Island and on their return they'll be living in Calgary.

Fern and Harley Foat of Revelstoke, BC along with daughter Connie Wallace of Sicamous, BC and three-year-old granddaughter Trina and new granddaughter six-week-old Kaitlin Wallace, visited at parental home of Bessie and Cliff Eckstrand and sister Bev and Gerald Felker, and were joined by husband Todd Wallace and brother Tony Foat of Fernie, BC and all attended the lovely wedding of Josh and Arvis Foat.

Donny Fisher just west of Didsbury snared a black gopher. Yes, black. I've never seen one, but some say they've seen a few, but I'm sure they are quite rare. A Didsbury taxidermist is going to mount it for him. I bet the Torrington Museum would like to have it.

Well, we prayed for rain and the weatherman has been most generous. We almost had to change our prayers to have it cease. According to Henry Kuelker's calculations we've received, since April 27, 14 2/10th inches of rain, and most of that in the last three weeks.

Crops, gardens and flowers are really thriving. Haying has started and will be a little late, but we're lucky to get the rain. North of Edmonton is still quite dry.

Classic at college

At the 5th Annual Provincial 4-H Horse Classic program later this month, approximately 150 participants will bring their horse-sense - but not their horses.

Horse Classic, July 28-30 at Olds College, is a knowledge and skills-based program that gives Alberta 4-Hers a chance to show what they have learned at club-level horse projects.

"Participants have to know their material and don't get any coaching from parents or leaders during the competition," says Dwayne Grover, 4-H Equine Advisory Committee Chairman. "They have to have done their studying at home and have to have some experience judging horses and different breeds of horses. They have to know the books. All the materials are provided for them, but they've got to study and know it all."

Among the activities at Horse Classic are the Horse Bowl Contest, which tests teams on their grasp of a wide range of equine-related topics; an Illustrated Talk Contest, where delegates demonstrate their knowledge through presentations and lectures; and, the Hippology Contest, in which all 4-H delegates attending Horse Classic participate. This competition tests delegates' understanding of horses and related topics through quizzes, identification questions, judging competitions, knowledge-station tests and team problems.

Sponsored by Gas Alberta, UFA, Lammle's Western Wear, Burwash Horse Gear and SSG, the Horse Classic is open to delegates aged 9 to 21.

"This year has seen the largest number of young delegates entering the competition," says Grover.

The top four delegates over the age of 15 qualify for the Western Round-Up Horse Competition in Denver, Colorado later in 1999, which is what many delegates strive for.

"Once they get a little older, they're really shooting for that trip to Denver," adds Grover.

"Although the Horse Classic is only in its fifth year, participation has tripled from what it was at the outset of the program. There are some people who have been there every year, but it seems that we're always getting new participants also."

Main Street contractors worked hard last week to put the final touches on the streets of Didsbury in preparation for the 1999 Alberta Seniors Games. The banners were purchased through the Main Street Program especially for the event.

Local artists place well at Stampede arts competition

Local Junior Art students who took part in the Calgary Stampede Junior Art Competition came home with some ribbons. Chantelle Wilshusen placed first in pencil drawing, Stacey Jensen took third in pencil, Kent Mullen brought home a second in oils, and Kristine Dahl was awarded an honourable mention in the oil painting.

In the Senior section, Joyce Mullen placed second in pencil and was third in china painting.

Earlier this year, Joyce Mullen and Elsie Archer were juried into the Federation of Canadian Artists as members, and Archer and Laurie Winter had paintings juried into the ACAC show at the Red Deer Museum.

Searching for the ultimate draft "Dream Team"

It's a whole new season and the games are about to begin! Last year Beauty and Pearl earned the MVP awards at the NAERIC Super Team Competition at Canadian Western Agribition. Will this year's Super Team stars arise from the benches of the Calgary Clydesdales, the Bismarck Belgians, from the Portage La Prairie Percherons or perhaps from the Saskatoon Shires? Don't count out the Grand Forks Grades!

Two draft horse teams each from Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and North Dakota will compete in the Canadian Western Finals Super Team Competition at 1 p.m. on Nov. 21. This "Search for the Dream Team" offers $5,000 in payouts and hitch fees.

The objective of Super Team competitions is to provide a venue for working draft horse teams to demonstrate their versatility, disposition, power, precision, speed and agility while negotiating a scored obstacle course, comprised of 10 required manoeuvres. The maximum allotted time to complete the prescribed manoeuvres, is eight minutes. Each required element of the obstacle course is worth 10 points to a maximum of 100 points. The competition is objectively scored, with teamsters either earning 10 points or no points per element. Final placings will be determined by successful completion of all manoeuvres in the shortest time period, followed by the most manoeuvres completed in the shortest time period.

In order to qualify for the Canadian Western Finals, teams must place first or second in their regional finals and you're in luck, seats are still available for the regional playoffs: Alberta Provincial Finals Competition - Aug. 28 at Olds College Riding Arena, Olds, AB. Contact is Rocky Cartier (780) 682-2471.

For specific information on the Canadian Western Finals contact Maxine Ponsford (306) 565-0565. For general information on the NAERIC Super Team Competitions, contact NAERIC at (502) 245-0425.

The promoter of the "$5,000 Search for the Dream Team" competition is the North American Equine Ranching Information Council (NAERIC). It is a non-profit association representing approximately 425 equine ranchers in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and North Dakota, who are engaged in the collection of pregnant mares' urine (PMU), used for production of estrogen replacement therapy to treat symptoms of menopause and bone disease, or osteoporosis.

Some of the horses competing in this competition may be enrolled in the $1 million NAERIC Incentive Program. This incentive program matches, dollar for dollar, up to $1 million, monies that have been awarded to qualified PMU-bred horses through purses, breeders' trust funds and other incentive programs.

Consumer alert

Health Canada is advising consumers to stop using certain brands of multipurpose lighters (also called "utility lighters" and "barbecue lighters") that could cause injury and burns.

Multipurpose lighters are sold through national grocery stores, hardware stores and retailers throughout Canada. They are designed for use around the home - for lighting barbecues, fireplaces, pilot lights, candles, campfires and stoves.

Those brands named below, either leaked fuel, had flame heights over 150 cm (6 inches), caught fire, continued to burn after they were turned off, or exploded (without flame) when exposed to elevated temperature.

These lighters include: Al-later, Coghlan's (disposable), Coghlan's (refillable), CTG, EZ Lighter, Fiesta Grill Gear (refillable), Fiesta Grill Gear (disposable), Gas Match, Gas Lighter, Grillpro (disposable), Grillpro (refillable), Keanall (refillable), Keanall (disposable), Norpro, Ronson Varaflame ignitor, Sanbei Match and Super.

By Marilyn Logan

Almost all of us have at least one kind of phobia. Some people hate snakes. Others are terrified of mice, spiders, needles or dentists. I have a passionate dislike of two things - heights and stinging insects. Whenever a bee decides to zoom in for a close look, I inevitably respond in a manner that runs contrary to all the rules on how to deal with these creatures. I flail my arms, run for cover or start blowing little short bursts of air frantically. I realize how ridiculous I must look to anyone watching. Bees seem to find this ritual unnerving as well. Just too strange! Although unconventional and quite unnecessary, my tactics usually work. The bees usually buzz off to more sane recipients of their attention.

One down time my husband and I took a leisurely drive into the interior of British Columbia following the Trans-Canada Highway. One harrowing part of this journey, for me, was knowing that we would have to manoeuvre the sharp corners, blind spots, occasional skittering rocks and the cliff-hugging piece of road east of Golden aptly named, Kicking Horse Pass. Despite the magnificent view, I frequently spend this part of the journey submerged in a novel or crouched on the seat as far as my seatbelt would allow. Warning bells start to sound. The potential for danger lurks beyond every twist. "What ifs" start to play havoc in my mind. What if an oncoming car decides to pull out and pass a slow moving truck or trailer just as we round a corner? What if we lose our steering or brakes? What if we career off the edge of the highway and plummet into the gorge? The scenarios get embellished as each mile passes.

On this particular trip we did not have the luxury of air conditioning to ward off the seasonably warm temperature. Both my husband and I had cranked open our windows to cool down and to feel the rush of mountain air wash over our faces. While navigating around yet another twist of this treacherous piece of highway we discovered that we had inadvertently picked up a third passenger. A huge bumble bee had flown or got stuck in the window. After making several angry loops around the interior of the car, this uninvited insect settled comfortably on my husband's lap. I was transfixed by the sight of him sitting there so calmly. But only for a moment. The fear of the death on the highway was quickly overcome by the fear of what vengeance this passenger had in store for my husband.

Quickly I reached down and removed my shoe. Whack! Still moving. Whack! Whack! A couple more should do the trick. I pummeled that bee relentlessly, temporarily forgetting that my husband sat helplessly underneath this creature. Normally calm and composed, and trying valiantly to concentrate on the road, he finally screamed, "Forget the bee! I'd rather be stung than end up mutilated!" I regained my senses immediately and looked at the remains of the bee. I admit I had been a little aggressive. That poor bee was now utterly unrecognizable.

We made a quick stop in Golden to survey the external damage from an upright position. All of us know what bug splats look like on car windows. Unfortunately this bug's remains weren't on the outside of the glass. A little scrubbing, and ice, was necessary before we could continue our journey. Luckily the bruising healed quickly. I blush at the memory. Guess it's time to get more control over this particular phobia or my husband will end up with one of his own.

Moral: The trick to survival is knowing when it's time to buzz off.

New computers

Looking for something to do this summer?

Now you can cruise on down to the Library, hop on one of their four new computers, and start surfing the Net.

There's been a lot of action on the computers since they were installed a short time ago.

The new hardware was bought with grants that the Library has received. After all the equipment and software has been bought, the computers will total almost $20,000.

The purpose of these new computers is so that the public can have access to the Internet and computers.

Also, they will allow people to access the Parkland Regional Library system to check out book availability and what's new in the libraries around the region.

Mark Fischer, from the Didsbury Library, says that anyone can come in and use the new computers, with or without a library card. He does remind parents that if your child is under 18 years, a permission form must be signed because of the lack of monitoring on the Internet.

There is no cost to use the new computers, but anything that is printed on them costs $0.25 a page.

Fischer says the library is hoping to secure another computer that will be used just for word processing, so that people can do their resumes and letters on it.

"It's a good idea to phone ahead and book a time," said Fischer, because the computers are really busy.

Clem Kuelker

The bell shall ring

Many improvements and new ideas are taking place at the Didsbury Museum all the time.

One such idea is to have the old school bell in the tower at the Museum start ringing again.

Now, if that bell was to ring twice daily, at 9 a.m. and at 4 p.m., someone would have to climb up there and pull the rope to manually ring the bell.

That's where Clem Kuelker comes in.

Kuelker designed a machine that will automatically ring the bell at the designated times each day.

Kuelker said the machine was quite easy to design, and that it only took him two hours to put it together.

He used an old pump jack and a motor out of an old washing machine. He put them on a base, extended the arm of the pump jack to give it some stroke and put an electrical timer on the invention.

The bell should start ringing on Sept. 1, in honour of school starting again.

DEMO Crew

A trip was recently taken to Calgary's Mustard Seed Street Ministry, by the Zion Evangelical Missionary Church Youth Ministry, on July 5-8.

The group of 12 spent three days and three nights at the Mustard Seed, and were exposed to a totally different way of life.

They heard story after story of how people ended up on the street. They listened to the story of a prostitute and that of an addict.

"It was very eye opening," said David Black, Youth Minister at ZEMC. "The people that are homeless and poor - they look just like you and me."

This trip was part of Demo Crew 99 (Demolishing the Darkness! Demonstrating the love of Jesus), a cooperative venture of the Mustard Seed Street Ministry, Alberta Bible College, Canadian Nazarene College and Rocky Mountain College.

This is the first time that ZEMC has taken part in the program and Black hopes that it will be something that happens every year.

The group ate what the homeless ate, slept on the floor of the basement at the Mustard Seed, and were out on the streets of Calgary all day long, carrying all their belongings with them.

"You experience what they experience," he said. "You really develop a heart of compassion for these people."

Crisis saferooms

You never know when a crisis might hit you or someone you love. You never know when you might need a safe place to stay, where you can feel secure and protected.

With this in mind, interagencies in the area are looking into the need for a "saferoom" into all of their hospitals.

These saferooms would be a monitored room for medium to low risk suicide victims, children, teens, adults and pretty much anyone who needed a safe place to stay for a night.

The idea is that the saferoom would replace sending these less critical cases to Calgary or Ponoka for care.

"We want a better system for our clients," said Marieanne Schacher, who is involved in the creation of the saferoom. "We want them to feel safe. It's a need that's seen in the community."

This "safety" issue is one that many members of the community are concerned about. Peter Versulys, a Mental Health Therapist for Alberta Mental Health Board, says that everyone from ambulance attendants to Victim Services volunteers are talking about "safety."

There are a lot of administrative details that need to be worked out before these rooms can be implemented, such as cost and structure, but the Mental Health staff hope that it is a possibility in the near future.

"The Community Advisory Committee sees this as something they'd like to explore further to improve," said Monica Flexaug, Regional Mental Health Services Manager.

Focus on the Family

James C. Dobson, PH. D., is founder and president of Focus on the Family, a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of the home. Dr. Dobson is married, the father of two grown children, and resides in Colorado. For 14 years he was an associate clinical professor of pediatrics and the university of Southern California School of Medicine, and served for 17 years on the attending staff of the Childrens' Hospital of Los Angeles. He has also been heavily involved in governmental activities relating to the preservation of the family.

QUESTION: What should you tell an adopted child about his or her biological parents in "closed" adoption situations? How do you answer his tough questions about why he wasn't wanted, etc.?

DR. DOBSON: I'll give you an answer written by Dr. Milton Levine in a vintage parenting book titled "Your Child From 2 to 5," then I'll comment on his recommendation. Dr. Levine was associate professor of pediatrics, New York Hospital, at the time. He listed three possible ways to tell an adopted child about his origin:

1. Tell the child his biological parents are dead.
2. State plainly that the biological parents were unable to care for their baby themselves.
3. Tell the child nothing is known about the biological parents, but that he was secured from an agency dedicated to finding good homes for babies.

Dr. Levine preferred the first approach: "The child who is told that his biological parents are dead is free to love the mother and father he lives with. He won't be tormented by a haunting obligation to search for his biological parents when he's grown."

He continued: "Since the possibility of losing one's parents is one of childhood's greatest fears, it is true that the youngster who is told that his biological parents are dead may feel that all parents, including his second set, are pretty impermanent. Nevertheless, I feel that in the long run the child will find it easier to adjust to death than to abandonment."

To tell a youngster that his parents gave him up because they were unable to take care for him is to present him with a complete rejection. He cannot comprehend the circumstances which might lead to such an act. But an unwholesome view of himself as an unwanted object, not worth fighting to keep, might be established."

I disagree with Dr. Levine at this point. I am unwilling to lie to my child about anything, and would not tell him that his natural parents were dead if that were not true. Sooner or later, he will learn that he has been misled, which could undermine our relationship and bring the entire adoption story under suspicion.

Instead, I would be inclined to tell the child that very little is known about his biological parents. Several inoffensive and vague possibilities could be offered to him, such as: "We can only guess at the reasons the man and woman could not raise you. They may have been extremely poor and were unable to give you the care you needed; or maybe the woman was sick; or she may not have had a home. We just don't know. But there is one thing we do know. She must have loved you very, very much -- enough to give you life and to make sure you were raised in a loving home where you would be taken care of. We're so thankful that the Lord led her to let us raise you."

QUESTION: We have a 5-year-old son who has been diagnosed with attention deficit disorder (ADD). He is really difficult to handle, and I have no idea how to manage him. I know he has a neurological problem, I don't feel right about making him obey as we do our other children. It is a big problem for us. What do you suggest?

DR. DOBSON: I understand your dilemma, but I urge you to discipline your son. Every youngster needs the security of defined limits, and the boy or girl with ADD or ADHD (attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder) is no exception. Such a child should be held responsible for his behavior, although the approach may be a little different.

For example, most children can be required to sit on a chair for disciplinary reasons, whereas some very hyperactive children would not be able to remain there. Similarly, corporal punishment is sometimes ineffective with a highly excitable little bundle of electricity. As with every aspect of parenthood, disciplinary measures for the ADD child must be suited to his or her unique characteristics and needs.

VACATION AND SCHOOL?
Vacation Bible Schools around town, like this one at Zion Evangelical Missionary Church, have kept kids busy during the long summer months.

Common Ground: Landmines must be stopped

By Jim Wong, Canadian Red Cross, Southern Alberta Region

In many parts of the world landmines aren't marked with warning signs.

They're marked with blood.

Detonated by the feet of passing civilians.

The 1980 UN Weapons Convention dictates that "parties to a conflict shall record the location of all pre-planned mine fields laid by them."

Wars dictate otherwise.

In the heat of battle landmines are scattered in huge numbers.

Angola alone has over nine million buried landmines. That's one for every single member of the population.

Landmines are also dropped with scant regard for their whereabouts, fired from launchers, or dropped from helicopters or planes. Which means there's little chance of mapping the weapons with any accuracy.

And so landmines buried for short-term military gain produce appalling long-term consequences.

When the trouble ends and the soldiers disappear these weapons remain to wreak havoc on the local population.

In Poland, people are still being killed or injured by landmines 50 years after World War II ended.

But even if the military had a rough idea where they'd left their landmines there is little chance they could remove them.

Modern plastic mines are incredibly difficult to detect, while other varieties are simply too dangerous to try and defuse. Afghanistan has nearly 3,000 deminers but it will take decades to clear the country, while huge tracts of Africa are 'no-go' areas because of landmines.

The situation is even worse for people in countries with ongoing conflicts. As the tide of battle shifts, an area that was safe one day can be mined the next.

Action needs to be taken now.

The Canadian Red Cross strongly supports the Ottawa Treaty which calls for a worldwide ban on the production, export and use of anti-personnel landmines. To date 135 countries have signed the Ottawa Treaty.

Southern Alberta can become involved by making a financial donation to the Canadian Red Cross Landmine Survivors Fund. Funds are used to operate 18 Red Cross rehabilitation centres in seven countries. These centres manufacture and fit artificial limbs, as well as provide psychological support to landmine survivors.

Local milestone marks world class sulphur production

Shell Canada Limited, Sultran Ltd., and Canadian Pacific Railway (CPR) had tonnes of reasons to celebrate last week, ten million, to be exact. The most effective formed sulphur unit train service in the world moved its ten millionth tonne of sulphur out of Shell Canada's Shantz Sulphur Forming Facility Tuesday afternoon. The Shantz facility is near Didsbury, about 65 kms north of Calgary. Hot liquid sulphur is transported from Shell's Caroline gas processing plant via a 42km underground pipeline to Shantz, where it is cooled and formed into dry pellets, loaded on special gondola railcars and sent to the west coast to be shipped to markets around the world.

Since the facility's opening in 1992, CPR, Sultran and Shell have worked together to expand sulphur transport from Shantz at an almost unbelievable rate, from shipping 15,000 tonnes its first year of operation, to an output of two million tonnes in 1998.

"Operating and logistics efficiencies allow the Shell plant to produce more than double the production of sulphur than any other plant in the world," said Shell Canada Senior Operating Officer Ray Woods. "Shell Caroline converts raw gas into up to 5,445 tonnes of pure liquid sulphur a day and sends it to Shantz for processing. This represents 25% of Alberta's sulphur."

"From a logistics standpoint, the train service at Shantz features quick loading and turnaround; more payload behind the railcars; and longer unit trains of over 6,000 feet, allowing for safe, timely and cost-effective transport of more sulphur per shipment," says Rick Sallee, vice-president, CPR Agri-products and Coal and Resource Products Groups. "These features, together with Sultran's scheduling, railcar provisions and port operations for overseas shipments, complete a logistics chain second to none in delivering sulphur to destinations around the world."

"We're pleased and proud to be part of the successful logistics management of ten million tonnes of formed sulphur from Shantz to the Vancouver terminals for overseas transport, and I look forward to moving ten million more," said

Lorne Friberg, president and chief executive officer, Sultran Ltd. "The level of service Shell Canada, Sultran and CPR provide together allows the Shantz facility to play a major role in internationally traded sulphur."

CPR's Sulphur team provides shippers with efficient, reliable and safe transit to locations throughout North America and to ports that enable delivery of Canada's liquid and formed sulphur to customers as far away as China, Brazil, South Africa and Morocco. To meet the diverse needs of sulphur customers, CPR offers unit train, block or single car service.

CPR is a North American carrier serving ports on both coasts of Canada and all regions in between, as well as the Midwestern US and the Chicago heartland, and the most industrialized and populous sectors of the US Northeast. CPR's western corridor is the shortest rail route for commodities moving from key producing areas in Western Canada to the Port of Vancouver. Through its southern corridor, CPR is the only carrier that can move freight from Vancouver to Chicago over its own rail line.

Shell Canada Limited is one of the largest integrated petroleum companies in Canada. The Company's Resources segment is one of the country's largest producers of crude oil, natural gas, natural gas liquids and bitumen, as well as one of the world's largest producers and marketers of sulphur, a critical ingredient in the manufacture of fertilizer, chemicals, nylon and pharmaceuticals. Sultran Ltd., based in Calgary, is a producer-owned, independently managed third-party transportation and logistics company that provides services to the Canadian sulphur industry. Sultran manages all services required to transport formed elemental sulphur from Alberta and BC destined for offshore export markets through to the Port of Vancouver. Sultran's services include coordinating plant site loading, managing overland transportation, tidewater inventory, vessel loading, draft surveys and quality control, as well as providing related accounting and information controls.

CTA analysis on railway costs

On July 20, the facilitator for the reform of the grain handling and transportation system, Arthur Kroeger, released the Canadian Transportation Agency's analysis of the current costs of grain transportation by rail.

"I wish to thank the Canadian Transportation Agency for providing me with independent and reliable information in a timely manner," said Kroeger.

"This analysis will enable us to develop sound recommendations to implement a more commercially oriented grain transportation system based on Justice Willard Estey's vision."

Kroeger was recently appointed by Transport Minister David Collenette to work with industry stakeholders, including producers, to prepare recommendations by Sept. 30, 1999, on the changes necessary to implement a reform package by crop year 2000/2001. This reform will be based on the framework outlined by Justice Estey's report for a more commercially oriented system.

The Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) found that the estimated total costs for moving the 1998 Western grain ranged from $676.5 million to $700.9 million. The CTA also found that the difference between the railways' net revenues and their estimated costs related to grain transportation for 1998 were between $99.4 million and $123.8 million, with the railways' estimated costs including a fair return on equity. The CTA also estimates that 49-55% of new productivity savings generated in 1998 were passed on to shippers.

The information contained in the report will contribute significantly to the work in progress by Kroeger, especially for two of the working groups created to support the work of Kroeger, the Working Group on Rate and Revenues and the Working Group on Competition (Safeguards).

The challenge for these working groups is to develop appropriate implementation details to ensure that farmers benefit from productivity gains derived from both the handling and transportation elements of the system in the future. This must be done in a way that maintains the incentive for the continued investment by the different stakeholders and to make the system more efficient.

Recommendation 15 of Justice Estey's final report recognized the principle that farmers should benefit from system productivity gains. Justice Estey indicated that there should be a future review of productivity gains in the grain handling and transportation system and, more particularly, of "... the flow-through of such gains to the farmer and, where appropriate, to the other stakeholders proportionate to their contribution."

In the report's conclusions, Estey also stated that: "Farmers can expect to see significantly lower charges for handling and transportation as the new millennium unfolds, especially if a new commercial and contract-based system emerges ..."

A statement made by Kroeger to his Steering Committee and Working Groups on this matter and other information on the reform of the grain handling and transportation system are available online at www.tc.gc.ca/railpolicy/default_e. A copy of the report is available on the internet site or by calling (613) 993-4843.

Salvaging hailed crops for livestock feed a good idea

The July thunderstorm season always results in some low-quality cow feed from crops that were intended for another purpose. The question that often arises is what is the potential for nitrate poisoning when feeding hail-damaged crops. The short answer is that the risk of nitrate poisoning can be high if precautions are not taken in harvesting and feeding. The good news is that effective measures can be taken to reduce the danger to livestock.

"First, an understanding of how nitrates accumulate in the plant and how livestock are affected is useful," says Lorne Erickson, forage specialist with Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, Rimby.

"Nitrate movement from the soil into the plant is part of the normal growth process. When the plant is actively growing it is able to convert the nitrate into protein and other nitrogen compounds at the same rate it is absorbed. If the crop is damaged by hail, frost, drought or herbicides, the plants cannot keep up with the nitrate absorption and the nitrates will accumulate."

This nitrate accumulation can be toxic to livestock, particularly if the crop is harvested and stored when levels are high. Ruminants (cattle, sheep, goats) are most susceptible than are monogastrics (horses, pigs) and cattle are the most at risk. Nitrate poisoning can cause a number of problems ranging from reduced gains to abortions and even death.

"In general, cereal crops and weeds are more likely to accumulate dangerous nitrate levels than are grasses or legumes, although the risk diminishes as the crop matures," says Erickson.

"Nitrate levels will be higher in damaged crops that have had a heavy application of nitrogen fertilizer or manure. An immature oat crop on fertile soil is the most likely to have high nitrate levels following hail or frost."

To reduce the risks of harvesting a high nitrate crop, it is usually best to harvest the crop very soon after the hail storm, before nitrates have had time to build up and while plant quality is still good. Often it is too wet to get on the field for a few days and if the weather is cool and cloudy and plant leaves are severely damaged, the nitrate level could be extremely high after three or four days. In this case, waiting a week or more could reduce nitrates as plants either die back or resume growing and using nitrate. Each field must be carefully checked to determine what growth potential remains and to estimate its ability to utilize accumulated nitrates.

"If grazing is the best way to salvage a hailed-out crop, be sure animals are full before turning them out, and initially only allow them to graze the damaged field for two or three hours each afternoon when nitrate levels are the lowest," adds Erickson.

"If nitrate levels are suspected to be extremely high, grazing might be the best option because nitrates are released more slowly than if dried feed and livestock will consume fresh forage much more slowly."

The choice of harvesting method, bales or silage, should be based on storage and feeding management. Nitrate levels are not likely to diminish once the feed is stored unless it's put up in poor condition and suffers a lot of spoilage. Nitrate levels may drop to some degree in the windrow if the crop is quite lush when cut and dries slowly before baling. Rain on the windrowed feed will also help to reduce nitrate levels.

"It is important that hail-damaged feed be stored separately, tested for nitrates and fed in combination with low-nitrate feeds to reduce the risk of poisoning," concludes Erickson.

Well pits can kill too, lack of oxygen dangerous

The recent tragic asphyxiation deaths of two central Alberta teens in a root cellar is a grim reminder of the unexpected hazards on a farm. This sort of accident has the potential to happen on many farms. A well pit could easily cause the same thing to happen.

Well pits are very common on older farmsteads, although they have not been allowed since the Environmental Protection Act was proclaimed in 1993. Well pits are below ground, poorly ventilated, often have some water in the bottom, and many have been used to store vegetables. These conditions could easily set up the same scenario that was reported in these deaths. Carbon dioxide is produced by fermentation. Carbon dioxide is heavier than air so that it can build up and be trapped in a low unventilated space. Someone entering this space can be suffocated due to the lack of oxygen.

Well pits can pose additional hazards however. Some well water contains dissolved gasses. Well water can contain carbon dioxide, hydrogen sulfide, or methane. If a well is located in a pit it can release these gasses into the pit.

Carbon dioxide, released from the well water, can build up in an enclosed space, just like the fermentation situation. Hydrogen sulfide (rotten egg odour) is also a common gas found in water. It is toxic at high enough levels, heavier than air, and can build up in a low enclosure. Methane is the third common gas found in well water. It is odour-less, lighter than air, and potentially explosive. Since it is lighter than air it is likely to escape from a well pit when it is opened up, but if trapped in high enough concentration, and exposed to a source of ignition, a serious explosion can occur.

What are the best ways to protect yourself and your family?

- Never enter a well pit without adequate air.
- Eliminating old well pits on your property by properly plugging up the old well and back filling the pit with clay.

If a well (in a well pit) is still being used, replace it with a pitless adaptor system and backfill the pit.

THERE'S NO ALTERNATIVE TO CONCRETE

Concrete is the basement building material with all the advantages.

It's a proven performer. Rugged. Tough. Durable. A concrete basement will never burn or rot.

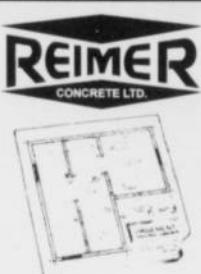

And concrete is safe. Quality controlled, concrete needs no toxic chemicals which may be hazardous to building occupants.

Concrete is an energy-wise choice. A concrete basement needs little heat or airconditioning. And concrete walls are easily insulated.

Economically, concrete is a good investment. A concrete basement will add years of life to the foundation and considerable dollars to the resale value of your building.

Add up the advantages. There's simply no alternative to quality controlled concrete. The best basement building material.

Didsbury Aqua Jets rule Innisfail meet

The Didsbury Aqua Jet Swim Club attended a swim meet in Innisfail on July 17. Teams attending were from Red Deer, High River, Okotoks, Didsbury, Innisfail, Calgary, Cochrane, Hanna, Trochu, Three Hills and Oyen. The Jet team collected enough team points to place the club in second for overall points. A provincial record was set in the Girls 9-10 butterfly by Jillian Tyler. Coaches Chernow, Palardy and Johnson are very proud of all the swimmers accomplishments. Way to go, Jets!

Junior Open Turnney

By Marge St. Clair

The junior golfers had a battle with that strong, strong wind July 8, but they took it in stride and enjoyed the day.

The prizes were awarded as follows:

1st flight:

1. Ryan Callewart

2. Jeff Royston

Low net - Dan Pow

2nd flight:

1. David Heikkinen

2. Matt Mantai

Low net - Adam Thompson

3rd flight:

1. Christopher Clazie

2. Tyler Lygas

Low net - Glenn Nesbitt

4th flight:

1. Kyle Couture

2. Mitch Sanderson

3. Aaron Herold

The juniors were treated to all their favorite things for lunch and excellent prizes, and hope to be able to do it again next year.

Swimmer flies to new provincial record

On July 17, the Didsbury Aqua Jet Swim Club participated in a swim meet held in Innisfail.

Aqua Jet swimmer Jillian Tyler blasted off the blocks and swam to a new provincial record in the 25 m butterfly for 9-10 year old girls.

The previous record, set in 1992, was 15.90 seconds and Tyler's time was clocked at 15.62 seconds.

Coaches Chernow, Palardy and Johnson are very proud of all the Aqua Jet swimmers and their swimming improvements.

These improvements are a reflection of the high calibre of coaching our club is priviledged to have.

They are hoping for some great swims at regionals, provincials and all remaining meets.

Aggregate winners at the Innisfail meet are as follows:

Girls 6 and U: Taylor Lappage, bronze.

Boys 6 and U: Brandon Chernow, silver; Tanner Sawkins, bronze; Terik

Flamond, gold.

Girls 9-10: Jillian Tyler, gold; Phoenix Smith, bronze.

Boys 11-12: Cameron Durieux, gold.

Girls 15-16: Pamela Palardy, bronze.

Girls 17 and O: Jodee Durieux, silver.

Boys 17 and O: Jim Palardy, silver.

About the CFC Bulletin

The Canadian Firearms Centre (CFC) Bulletin explains specific areas of the Firearms Act and how it affects you. The CFC coordinates the work of federal and provincial/territorial partners implementing the Firearms Act which is being phased in from Dec. 1, 1998 to Jan. 1, 2003.

Before you register ...

Before you can register your firearms, you must have a firearms license or a valid Firearms Acquisition Certificate (FAC). You cannot register your firearms without possessing a license or a valid FAC. If you send in your registration application without possessing a license or a valid FAC, or at least having applied for a license, your application will be put on hold and you will be notified by telephone or by mail that you must apply for a firearms license.

To get a license fill out an:

-application of a Possession-Only License (form JUS 669); or,

-application for a Possession and Acquisition License (form JUS 670).

You can apply for a license and to register your firearms at the same time. Simply fill out the license and registration application forms and mail them together in the same envelope. Your license application will be processed first. Once your license application is approved, your registration application will be processed.

You will receive both your license and registration certificate in the mail. Application forms are available at your local post office, by calling the Canadian Firearms Centre toll-free at 1-800-731-4000, or by printing them off the CFC website at www.cfc-ccaf.gc.ca.

For information about safety courses test, or just challenge and pass the test without taking the courses. You don't have to take the courses and/or pass the test if:

-You have already passed the test;

-You passed the Canadian Firearms Safety Course test prior to Feb. 1, 1999; or

-You received alternative certification by your CFO (provided that you have continuously owned a firearm since Jan. 1, 1979). For more information, contact your CFO's office. Minors and people who have been subject to a firearms prohibition order must have both take the appropriate course and pass the test if they want a license.

The safety course or test is not required to get a Possession-Only License. This license allows individuals simply to keep and use the firearms they already owned on Dec. 1, 1998 and to borrow firearms of the same class.

This license is not available after Dec. 31, 2000; only the Possession and Acquisition License will be available after that date.

For information about safety courses in your area, contact your CFO. To get in touch with your CFO call the Canadian Firearms Centre toll-free at 1-800-731-4000 and an operator will connect your call.

Reminder about fee increases:

On Dec. 1, 1999:

-the fee for a possession-only license increases from $10 to $45; and

-the fee for registering all the firearms you owned on Dec. 1, 1998 increases from $10 to $14.

Please note: These fees are for the processing of your application forms and are non-refundable.
